THREE GIRLS ARE DROWNED IN SEA

Three little Japanese girls, each of them but 11 years old, were drowned yesterday afternoon in a hole at the foot of Ward street. No one saw the tragedy, but three little piles of clothes lying on the beach told the story. The children had gone in bathing, on their way home from school, had stepped into a deep hole made by the government dredger some time ago, and had been unable to get out.

The names of the little victims of the sea were Tsuu Hada, Tsuruwo Oaki and Yoshi Sonata. Yesterday morning, as usual, they left their homes in Kakaako for the Japanese school. Returning home in the afternoon, it is evident that they made up their minds to go in bathing.

Some 200 feet out from the point at the foot of Ward street, where they went in the government dredger some time ago was engaged in dredging for the purpose of getting coral for filling in the beach road. A hole about 12 feet in depth had been dredged, and into this the children stepped. They never came out alive.

No particular alarm was felt at their absence, even when they were not home in time for supper. But shortly after 6 o'clock last evening some one walking along the beach found the clothing of the three children. Their parents were at once informed and a search for the bodies was begun. The father of Tsuu Hada dived into the hole and emerged with the body of his daughter. Returning he brought out the other two. They were taken to the morgue, amid the loud grief of their mothers. No inquest, probably, will be held.

DEATH BY DROWNING IS JURY'S VERDICT

The coroner's jury, called to hold the inquest on the body of Charlie Heleloa, who was drowned in the harbor last Sunday night, listened to the evidence last night and returned the following verdict:

"That Charlie Heleloa came to his death on or about September 30, by drowning, in the harbor of Honolulu, under circumstances to this jury unknown."

The evidence introduced was about the same as the story told in the Bulletin last Monday. Testimony was given that Heleloa was a drinking man, Purser Smith of the Ke Au Hou told of hearing the splash as the man fell off the inter-island wharf and of running around to try to get him out. The body drifted under the wharf and no attempt was made to dive for it.

The jurors were U. Napoleon, W. Ahia, H. M. Ayres, W. Savidge, Ned Gear and Tom McGiffin.

Trent Alone

USED NAME OF

Vida At Waialua

Editor Evening Bulletin:—For the benefit of the Old Rag and Kanaka Hater Tiers I desire to say this, that Vida's name was never at any time mentioned either by myself or any of those who made speeches at the Waialua meeting last Saturday evening nor was his name hoisted or hissed at by any one, as there was no occasion for it, excepting perhaps by the few Tiers' Ghosts that were there that night. The meeting was unquestionably a large and peaceable one and the speeches were well received.

Since the Old-Rag-Time-Tier is so anxious to know the truth of the so-called Vida's truth, I have this to say: that the first man I met that night after I got through my speech and who had mentioned Vida, was Mr. Trent, who spoke in this fashion: "Why didn't you say something about Vida?" I answered him, "There is no occasion for using his name here as his candidacy is with the electors of the district of Honolulu only."

This was the only time that Vida's name was ever brought to my attention while at Waialua. Whoever said I used Vida's name is a liar of the blackest kind, yet I thank the devil who used it, and I shall use it as campaign material during this campaign.

Respectfully yours,
A. S. KALEIOPU.

Honolulu, Oct. 3, 1906.

FERNANDEZ' RUN WEAKENS HARVEY

The apostasy of Abraham Fernandez, who yesterday descended from the car of the Democrats to the bosom of the Home Rulers, is the subject of considerable discussion in political circles today. Among Republicans his candidacy on the Home Rule ticket is not looked upon with sorrow. Politicians say that what W. W. Harris had most to fear was the anti-Sam Johnson faction which would have made Frank Harvey a dangerous rival for him had he and Harris been alone in the field. Now, however, that Fernandez is also in the game, it is figured that he will take a number of the votes which would otherwise have been Frank Harvey's certain share, and that therefore Harris' chances for election have been made infinitely stronger.

The Democrats profess to look upon the fall of Brother Fernandez with sorrow rather than with anger. "Shanks" Mossman, who is now the practical leader of the Democratic campaign, said this morning that he had always regarded Fernandez as a weak sister, who was but lukewarm in his allegiance to the cause of Democracy. John Emmeluth said philosophically that the party was better without such men as forsake the party when they thought they had a grievance. Frank Harvey let it be known that in spite of all he still regarded Fernandez as his friend, although the gentle Mormon elder had not been particularly sparing in his references to Harvey. Harvey says that he was in the hands of his friends, willing to take any place on the ticket which they wanted to place him in, and that his taking of the place of Supervisor-at-Large was not his work, but that of the convention. Prendergast said rather indignantly that Fernandez had no right to say that the Democrats had thrown him down. It was true that they had given Harvey the place of Supervisor-at-Large, on which Fernandez had cast sheep's eyes, but they had also nominated Fernandez for a district supervisorship and this he had spurned himself.

In the meantime the Democrats are still holding their precinct meetings every night. Tonight the Ninth Precinct of the Fourth District will meet at Solomon Meheula's residence on the extension of Fort Street, while the Eleventh Precinct of the Fifth will meet at Rev. Biplane's house on Kuna-kiki street near Liliha.

The joint meeting of the First and Second Precincts of the Fourth last night at Moiliili was destined to become historic by the appearance on the stump of R. Beverley Kidd. Although Kidd is no child in politics this was his maiden speech, and it was listened to with great interest by his devoted political family. Kidd in his speech dished out a Hearst barrel-full of good advice, recommending straight politics, house-to-house canvassing and the "taking of voters by the hand." Among the other speakers of the evening were Curtis P. Inakea, W. W. Thayer, R. H. Trent, Col. McCarthy and others.

WISCONSIN HOMEWARD BOUND

thur T. Percival, Acting Warrant Machinist John P. Richter, Pay Clerk John E. Francis.

The keel of the Wisconsin was laid February 9, 1897, and she was launched October 26, 1898. She went into commission February 4, 1901.

Since She Sailed from Here

The battleship sailed from Bremerton for the Asiatic station on May 14, 1903. She stopped at Honolulu for five days, and the officers and men still retain pleasant memories of their visit here and express the wish that, in spite of the fact that they are homeward bound, they might remain here longer.

The men of the Wisconsin will be given shore liberty and Honolulu will be full of the sailors of the United States Navy, which means the finest sailors of the world.

The Wisconsin lies alongside the Japanese tramping ship Anegawa, and the contrast is somewhat startling. The Japanese vessel is black and gloomy in appearance. The American is as white as paint can make her. Her decks are polished white, her brasses shine in the sun, while the great guns projecting from her turrets and ports have been cleaned and polished until they glisten. She lies there, the embodiment of power and strength—not black and forboding, but promising protection to the people she represents.

THE SHERIDAN MAY BE FLOATED NEXT FRIDAY

There have been no new developments in the Sheridan situation since last reports yesterday. She is still lying on the sand, but it is stated that she is on so lightly that she is almost floating and it will be no trouble to take her off when things are in readiness. Work is now going on shifting the position of boilers and heavy machinery so that the ship will not be top-heavy and in danger of turning turtle.

The leak is not regarded as at all serious and the pumps will have no difficulty in taking out the water that comes in.

The Iroquois came in last night, to remain until Captain Peabody is ready to have a pull made. She will probably go out again next Friday morning, if present plans are carried into effect. The Manning and Iwaland are still with the Sheridan, as is the transport Buford.

longer than they will be able to do at this time. The vessel went from here to Yokohama, where she was made the flagship of the Southern Squadron, under command of Admiral Cooper. She took part in the summer maneuvers at Chefoo, at which there were assembled more vessels of the United States Navy than ever before were seen on a foreign station. After the segregation of the vessels into battleship, cruiser and Philippine squadrons, in November, 1903, unexpected orders were received for the fleet to sail immediately for Honolulu. The fleet was here on Christmas Day, 1903. The stay was not long, but long enough for the people of Honolulu to get acquainted with the Wisconsin and her officers and men, so that they are not strangers as they return today.

Trouble was imminent between Russia and Japan, and on December 29 the fleet sailed again for the Asiatic station, where the vessels were witnesses of a part of the struggle between those Powers. At Manila Captain Sebre, who had brought the ship from Bremerton, turned over the command to Captain Clover.

At Woonung, on July 1, 1904, Admiral Stirling relieved Admiral Cooper as commander in chief of the squadron, retaining the Wisconsin as his flagship. The Wisconsin was at Woonung when the disabled Russian cruiser Askold crept in, a refugee from Port Arthur, from which place she had escaped three days before. In October the Wisconsin returned to Manila for target practice.

During the greater part of 1905 the Wisconsin was moving about from place to place on the China coast. In September she went to Japan, where she was present when the Japanese Emperor reviewed his victorious fleet in Tokyo Bay.

Going from Nagasaki to Amoy, the Wisconsin, on November 3d and 4th, encountered the worst storm through which she ever passed. Two lifeboats were smashed on the davits, the after gangway was carried away and the booms were torn from her side. She proved herself seaworthy, however, and came out of the conflict with the elements without suffering any material damage.

At Hongkong, on December 14th, 1905, Captain Drake, the present commanding officer, relieved Captain Clover.

Wins President's Trophy

After last Christmas the Wisconsin returned to Cavite to engage in target practice. After three days' firing she had won the pennant which now flies at her fore, demonstrating that her gunners are the best on any of the battleships of the United States Navy. Both officers and men are very proud of this trophy, earned as it was. The pennant is a triangle of red, with a black ball in the center.

During the balance of the present year the Wisconsin has been mostly in Chinese and Japanese waters.

The vessel has been away from home about forty months, and in that time has visited practically every place of interest in China, Japan and the Philippines. She has been at Honolulu, at Guam and at Wake's Island. She has been present near the field of action of the greatest war of recent years, and since she left home has steamed a distance of 38,000 miles. The Wisconsin, since she first went into commission, has traveled 150,000 miles.

When the battleship steams out of Honolulu harbor, next Monday morning, she will be flying a magnificent "homeward bound pennant." This pennant is 550 feet long, made of pure Chinese silk and of extremely fine quality. In addition she will fly her homeward bound flag, also made of silk and of great size. This flag was bought by the men of the ship, who subscribed for the purpose the sum of 550 yen.

The men of the Wisconsin will be given shore liberty and Honolulu will be full of the sailors of the United States Navy, which means the finest sailors of the world.
